

Site was Hacked

Dear Responsible Family Visitors:

Due to the interruption of site hackers, we apologize that the Responsible Family site was down last night. We are not quite sure what happened, but it is clear that the site was hacked by someone who uploaded a phishing scam. I apologize if this affected you or your experience in any way. Please trust that we will always do whatever we can to remedy any situation such as this.

In the three and a half months that the site has been up, we have had several situations with hackers and spam. If you ever see any information on this site that is not extremely respectful and informative, please know that we are most likely already on the issue and it will be corrected promptly. Unfortunately, hackers are part of the internet and not civilized enough to read our message and be the best person they can be, otherwise they would not be hijacking a site for families and placing inappropriate content on our pages!

Again, we sincerely apologize if this affected you. We appreciate your support and look forward to providing you with the best content on the web for families who want to live safe, healthy, happy, RESPECTFUL lives!

Responsibly Yours,

Britt Michaelian

Founder and CEO

Responsible Family Company

info @ responsiblefamily . com